

Carson City Hospital Emergency Department receives Tommy Moose donation

CARSON CITY — More than 100,000 Tommy Moose stuffed animals have been donated coast-to-coast by Moose International. Their most recent donation, from the Greenville Moose Lodge, was to the Carson City Hospital (CCH) Emergency Department on Dec. 3.

Moose International was founded in the late 1800s as a social gathering opportunity for men. It was later reinvented in the early 1900s with the goal of brightening the futures of children in need across North America – and they have done just that. Tommy Moose helps comfort children in traumatic situations.

CCH Emergency Department patient care tech Jason Anderson was present for the generous donation from the Greenville Moose Lodge. “It’s amazing how much comfort a stuffed animal can bring to children in the Emergency Department,” said Anderson. “They arrive in tears, but with one tight squeeze, Tommy Moose provides a sense of security.”
